

It was a great pleasure to attend the 2nd Lucerne Graduate Academy for Law and Economics. The bespoke intensive one-week programme in collaboration with the Notre Dame Law School Research Program on Law and Market Behavior opened new horizons towards novel scientific interdisciplinary research. The city of Lucerne situated in central Switzerland is an amazing town with a rich history known for its stunning lake views and preserved bridges and churches, charming architecture, old mansions and squares and beautiful lakeside promenades with a serene and idyllic setting.

We acquired valuable insights from renowned international researchers and practitioners: Prof. Adi Leibovitch's lectures on the methods and techniques for using bivariate and multivariate factor correlation analysis when examining certain legal phenomena from an economic point of view; Prof. Avshalom Tor's lectures on economy, efficiency and effectiveness of nudging tools; Prof. Dr. Klaus Mathis' outstanding lecture on the legal genesis and history of Switzerland; Professor Deborah Tor's lecture on the legal status of non-muslims in classical Islam; discussion on the emergence of the corporate form by Professor Giuseppe Dari-Mattiacci.

Excellent organization, in orderly Swiss fashion, "spiced up" with many culinary surprises organized by the team of Prof. Dr. Klaus Mathis: Alexander Gian-Carlo Baumann, Elias Aliverti, Daniel Gmür, and Simon Schmid.
